Vince Coleman

Vince Coleman was one of the most exciting players in baseball in the late 1980s and early 1990s. He was a speedy outfielder who led the National League in stolen bases four times. Coleman was also a key member of the Cardinals' 1987 World Series championship team.

After leaving the Cardinals, Coleman played for several other teams, including the New York Mets, Cincinnati Reds, and Baltimore Orioles. He retired from baseball in 1997.

Since retiring from baseball, Coleman has worked as a coach and a broadcaster. He is currently a coach for the St. Louis Cardinals' Class A affiliate, the Peoria Chiefs.

Ernie Broglio

Ernie Broglio was one of the most dominant pitchers in the National League in the 1950s. He led the league in strikeouts twice and won the Cy Young Award in 1959.

After leaving the Cardinals, Broglio played for several other teams, including the Chicago Cubs, Detroit Tigers, and Kansas City Athletics. He retired from baseball in 1965.

Since retiring from baseball, Broglio has worked as a coach and a broadcaster. He is currently a special assistant to the general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

John Tudor

John Tudor was one of the most reliable pitchers in the National League in the 1980s and 1990s. He was a four-time All-Star and won the World Series with the Cardinals in 1982.

After leaving the Cardinals, Tudor played for several other teams, including the Montreal Expos, Los Angeles Dodgers, and Philadelphia Phillies. He retired from baseball in 1998.

Since retiring from baseball, Tudor has worked as a coach and a broadcaster. He is currently a special assistant to the general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

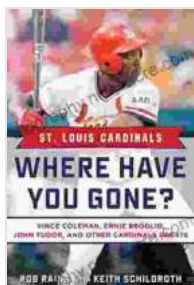

Other Cardinals

In addition to Coleman, Broglio, and Tudor, there are many other former Cardinals who have gone on to have successful careers in other fields.

Here are a few examples:

- Bob Gibson: After retiring from baseball, Gibson became a successful businessman and author.
- Ozzie Smith: After retiring from baseball, Smith became a successful manager and broadcaster.
- Whitey Herzog: After retiring from baseball, Herzog became a successful manager and general manager.
- Tony La Russa: After retiring from baseball, La Russa became a successful manager. He is currently the manager of the Arizona Diamondbacks.

The St. Louis Cardinals have a long and storied history, with many great players who have gone on to have successful careers both on and off the field. The players mentioned above are just a few examples of the many Cardinals who have made a lasting impact on the game of baseball.
